Discovery Identifies New Way to Prevent Certain Strokes
Hundreds of thousands of people could be helped every year thanks to new findings by a team of Northwestern Medicine scientists led by co-investigators Richard Bernstein, MD, PhD (pictured here), and Rod Passman, MD. Read more >

New Imaging Technique Can Diagnose Common Heart Condition
Senior author, Michael Markl, PhD, reported in Circulation that a new method for measuring blood flow in the heart and vessels can diagnose bicuspid aortic valve and may lead to better prediction of complications. Read more >

Award Recognizes Humanitarian Efforts
Wilson Hartz, MD, is honored for his volunteer work in impoverished areas of Guatemala as part of Northwestern Memorial HealthCare’s 35th Annual Humanitarian Award program. Watch video >

Announcements
Give Us Your Input: My Northwestern Medicine Survey
Coding System for Diagnosis Reporting, Billing and Research to Change

Events
Thurs, Feb 20 Center for Education in Medicine: The Role of Professional Culture in Feedback Conversations
Fri, March 7 The Arthur C. Nielsen, Jr. Vascular Symposium
More Events

Did you know?
Starting in fall 2014, Northwestern University will offer an online Master of Science in Global Health program. The interdisciplinary program consists of 12 online courses, each 10 weeks in length.
Northwestern University Hosts First Annual Global Health Case Competition

Two Feinberg students were on the winning team and will compete in an international competition next month. Read more >