Physician-Scholar Position in Simulation and Immersive Learning

Northwestern University is seeking an exceptional academic physician to help develop and assist in leading innovative educational programs through the Department of Emergency Medicine and the Center for Simulation Technology and Immersive Learning Center.

The ideal candidate should be a nationally recognized education leader with an established record of accomplishment in curriculum development with a strong focus on immersive learning including the use of simulation. Ideally the candidate should also possess strong skills in ultrasound and other tools essential for the practice of emergency medicine. The selected candidate should be committed to collaboration and teamwork, and to ensuring that the department and institution are recognized nationally for educational leadership.

Formal training in education research methodology is desired. The ideal candidate will have a track record of peer reviewed publications in educational topics and will be a recognized national leader in education. It is essential that the candidate has demonstrated skills in developing, implementing, and evaluating educational programs for physicians. The candidate must be eligible to practice emergency medicine in the State of Illinois. Graduates of four year emergency medicine residencies are desired. This is a full-time faculty position in the Department of Emergency Medicine on the Clinical Scholar (non-tenure) track of Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine. Rank is Assistant Professor. Salary is commensurate with candidate's training and experience. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply.

Interested candidates should submit their curriculum vitae prior to November 30, 2011, to:
