“As a member of Northwestern’s medical alumni community, you not only play an essential role in our history but are helping now to lay the groundwork for our future. Thank you for embracing the next generation. Your participation, volunteerism, and philanthropy enable us to prepare our students to carry Northwestern’s name forward with as much strength as those who came before them.”

— Eric G. Neilson, MD, vice dean for Medical Affairs and Lewis Landsberg Dean

Mentoring

In the field of medicine, mentoring can have a tremendous impact. We offer several opportunities for you to make a difference by mentoring students and fellow alumni, both on campus or from your home.

Help Our Students Travel (HOST) Program

176 alumni from 30 states are participating

How did the HOST Program help you?

“The interview trail can be very expensive with many students traveling to 15 or more cities across the United States. It was invaluable to have both a place to stay and a friendly face to greet me through the HOST program. In Washington, DC, my host even showed me around the city and shared insight into the cost of living and the cultures of different neighborhoods. She even reached out to me before Match to wish me luck! I consider her a lifelong contact.”

—Brianna Knoll, ’18 MD
Why did you want to become a medical school mentor?

I am volunteering as a mentor because so many of the decisions that I made early in my medical life would have been easier and better informed if I had been exposed to someone with the wisdom earned by experience.

When I was a medical student, I had no interaction with the medical alumni. Our career paths were often chosen solely based on interactions with our attendings and residents. I was fortunate to have attendings who encouraged my pursuit of plastic surgery. Truthfully, though, it was only encouragement. There was little discussion about the reality of a life in surgery. I had no idea about the demands of residency, of establishing a surgery practice, and of completing the medical boards. I certainly never had the benefit of talking to a female surgeon about the unique demands imparted on a female surgeon, including pregnancy, raising children, and being a minority in a demanding field.

When I was asked to be a part of the national Medical Alumni Association Board, I gladly accepted the offer since I thought it would be a way for me to mentor and help students who could use my insight. As a member of the mentoring committee, I have tried to make myself available to students who might want to pursue a career in surgery.”

The Power of a Gift

Thank you to all the Feinberg alumni and friends who generously provided funds supporting the purchase of white coats for the 160 entering medical students in the Class of 2022. Your gifts are more than coats—they are symbols of encouragement for the newest generation of Feinberg medical students.

Dear alumni...

I want to thank you for generously providing me with my white coat! One of the things I hope to come to love most about medicine is the generosity of the field. It never ceases to amaze me how kind, helpful, and charitable physicians are with their time and expertise. I hope to carry this tradition forward during my career. In doing so, you have given me the professional small way to wear throughout that career identity that I will wear throughout that career. I am immensely grateful. Thank you!

Annual Gift

An annual gift shows you are a part of the Feinberg community and are invested in the continued success of the medical school. Your gift ensures that students receive opportunities to pursue a medical career. No matter where you direct your gift, your support makes Feinberg stronger.

Leadership Gift

A leadership gift is an investment in the medical school that greatly advances our pursuit of excellence in education, research, and care. Leadership gifts can create life-changing scholarships, further cutting-edge investigations, and build programs and buildings. These gifts strengthen our mission and help us to impact the health of humankind.

Estate Gift

An estate gift celebrates the future and cements your impact for generations to come. It will make a difference in the lives of our best and brightest students and faculty. Individuals who document an estate gift are inducted into the Henry and Emma Rogers Society, which celebrates these meaningful commitments and creates a legacy for you and your family.
A tuition-free medical school at Northwestern would require an $800 million endowment for scholarships. Today, our endowment stands at an approximate value of $172 million thanks to our many donors, including alumni like you who have given through class and reunion giving efforts.
