

Program Director-Master of Public Health

The Institute for Public Health and Medicine at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine seeks a Director for the Master of Public Health (MPH) Program within the Center for Education in Health Sciences (CEHS). Responsibilities include: setting the program's strategic direction, leading innovation and implementation in all program areas (e.g., curriculum, community and alumni engagement, faculty development, student admissions and support), supervising program faculty leaders, and contributing substantially to the program's accreditation, educational advancement, equity, diversity, and inclusion initiatives, and public health workforce development activities.

Qualified candidates will be a Northwestern faculty member with associate or full professor rank (regardless of faculty track), an MPH in addition to a relevant doctoral degree (e.g., PhD, DrPH, EdD, MD, JD), leadership experience in academic public health (e.g., as a director, administrator, instructor, committee chair, and/or advisor), interest in working with a diverse community of faculty/staff/students, and a strong commitment to health equity, anti-racism, and social justice.

The position requires approximately 40 - 50 percent effort. The start date is negotiable, and the position will remain open until filled.

To apply, please provide a letter describing your interest and qualifications for the position, an updated CV, and contact information for three references. Please send your application materials to Ali Ebbrecht at alexis.ebbrecht@northwestern.edu by December 31, 2021.

Please contact the search chair, Neil Jordan, Director of CEHS, at neil-jordan@northwestern.edu for additional information about the position.

Northwestern requires all staff and faculty to be vaccinated against COVID-19, subject to limited exceptions. For more information, please visit our COVID-19 and Campus Updates website.
